BROUGHT DOPE TO HAWAII

The one time crack yacht Vera, which many old-timers in Honolulu will doubtless readily recall as having made a series of profitable trips from the Coast to the islands, in the guise of a pleasure craft, but in reality engaged in the illicit importation of opium, has finally settled into the North-west Coast. Better known here as the Halcyon, another of the sealing schooners of Puget Sound, made notorious years ago while engaged in the opium smuggling traffic, will spend the rest of her days in the fishing industry, according to word received here today. The latest craft to be purchased for the fishing industry is the handsome schooner Vera, formerly the smuggler Halcyon, which has been traded to a Puget Sound fishing concern in exchange for the sealing schooner Teresa.

The Vera was to have been used in Arctic exploration by Dr. Smith, of Victoria, but with the dispatching of the Stefansson expedition to the Arctic by the Canadian government in the steamer Karluk, now fitting out at Esquimaux, the Vera's expedition which was to have started this spring was abandoned.

The Teresa had been sold to the American fishing concern as an American bottom, but it has been discovered that she is still a British bottom, and her owners offered to trade her back to the Victoria Sealing company in exchange for the Vera by paying an additional amount, and the proposal has been accepted.

The Vera was built by Turner in San Francisco bay, and is a beautifully modelled craft. She is eighty feet long and her planking is of full length material. She has a coppered bottom and was originally built as a smuggler in the guise of a yacht. She was caught at Honolulu some years ago with several tons of opium aboard, which was being taken from China to San Francisco. She was later sold as a sealer and operated out of Victoria.

MISFORTUNE IN WAKE OF ALOHA

Adrift in the doldrums for forty-five days while on a passage from Australia to the Pacific coast of the United States, misfortune is alleged to have dogged the progress of the four-masted schooner Aloha, well known to the lumber trade in the Hawaiian islands, that is now awaiting a cargo at Vancouver. According to Captain C. Peterson, the vessel was ninety-five days making the passage from Australia and of this time forty-five days were spent in drifting aimlessly about in the vicinity of the equator, waiting for a breeze.

The craft was bound for the Fraser river via San Francisco, where she discharged a cargo of coal before going up the coast. She had been posted as missing because of her long voyage. When four days out from the Golden Gate on her way north a seaman, named Helvor Sorenson, missed his footing while aloft on the fore-topmast and fell to the deck. He was instantly killed by the fall.

When seven days out from San Francisco the craft ran into a gale which carried away several sails, including a storm jib. She was finally picked up off Cape Flattery by the tug Lorne and towed to the Royal roads for discharge of ballast. The Aloha is one of the best known lumber schooners on the coast and is of 743 tons register.

Speaking of the way the innocent suffer, little Willie Miggus was chased two blocks by a near-sighted man who said Willie was making faces at him. Willie was only learning to play the jewsharp.

"Do you know any French?" Yes; I can shrug my shoulders."

A Kansas judge says a wife should tell her husband everything she knows. The average wife does.
